

Edgar: You know, this isn't the first time that animals have disappeared from the aquarium. I mean, just last year, two venomous snakes just went away. Sandy, she actually told me she thought they escaped on their own, like they had swum down the drain. I checked the drains. There's nothing there. Even called the water treatment plant. Nothing. Nothing.

Seems suspicious, doesn't it?

You know, it's been so long. We just have heard nothing. Nothing. I mean, wherever they got to, they'd be a pain to take care of. You have to feed them all these small fishes and small crabs and try not to get bitten. You know, two thefts is a rash of thefts. We should put up fences. You know, something nice, Something, something bronze with a sea theme.

I'd be happy to provide.
